PREFACE.

The last general Catalogue of the Apprentices' Library was published in 1865, since which time two supplements have been issued, one in January, 1869, and the other in June, 1869, the latter embracing all the works included in the first supplement. These Catalogues were all constructed on a very imperfect plan, and gave merely a list of authors, with brief titles of their works. Imprint and edition were omitted, and in a few cases only tables of contents were given. To assist the reader in his search for books on a given subject, there was, by way of appendix, in the main Catalogue only, an imperfect classification.

The rapid increase of the library, both in books and readers, soon made it evident that a new Catalogue was imperatively needed, and as no reliance could be placed on the former catalogues by reason of their manifold errors, it was determined to prepare the new Catalogue from the books themselves.

This necessitated the handling of every book, and was thought a favorable opportunity to introduce a better system of arrangement on the shelves—the Numerical system under which the books were then placed, having caused considerable delay and inconvenience in the daily routine of the library.

The Alphabetical system was first tried but soon proved unsatisfactory, principally by reason of the confusion introduced among the books through the want of a number to control their position on the shelves.

In this state of affairs, the compiler of the present volume was requested by the Library Committee to examine into, and report on, the various systems of library economy in use, or recommended for adoption, with the view of selecting the one that was most adapted to the wants and requirements of the library. A careful study was accordingly made of the various works bearing on the subject, and the result was submitted to the Committee in a report which was accepted, and the system therein explained and recommended was adopted.

The system was first applied to the new purchases in December 1871, and a catalogue of them, essentially based on the same principles as the present one, was printed in January, 1873, under the title of the "Second Supplement to the Catalogue of Books in the Apprentices' Library"; but was not applied to the whole library until November, 1872. Every volume was then taken down from the shelves, furnished with new paper covers, registered, classified, catalogued, renumbered, relettered, and replaced on the shelves.

In this manner some 40,000 volumes were successively handled, and the work was finally completed in eight months, during which time the ordinary current work of the Library, including an average daily circulation of 500 volumes, was performed as usual.

Since then the system has been in operation, and notwithstanding that no printed catalogue has been accessible to the readers, yet in no instance have they failed to get the books desired, if on the shelves at the time, and in most cases without the attendants consulting even the card catalogue for the use of the Library employees.

The system alluded to above, although suggested by a study of the different systems in use, differs essentially from them all, both in its general principles as well as in its details, and it may perhaps be proper to give a synopsis of its leading features.

In his investigations into the principles of different methods of arrangement, the writer discovered at an early stage of his studies, that all the systems now in use, or recommended, are but variations from, and are all reducible to, one or more of the following three, namely—the Numerical, the Alphabetical, or the Classified.

One of these fundamental systems has been adopted by the framers of all the current systems; either one or the other of the remaining two being introduced in combination with it, in a subordinate position.

The present system, however, accepts all three as co-ordinate parts of one whole, and is therefore neither exclusively Numerical, nor Alphabetical, nor Classsified, but is at the same time, and in an equal degree, all three, and thus preserves all the advantages of each system, and by means of the other two excludes and counteracts such defects as are inherent in each of the three when used alone.

To illustrate and explain: the books are arranged first in twenty-five general classes, which are again subdivided into nine sub-classes each, thus making altogether 250 classes.

Secondly, the books in each sub-class are placed according to size, that is to say, according to their actual heighth in inches, and not according to the folding of the leaves. The various sizes are grouped under four heads, which correspond very nearly to the ordinary 12°, 8°, 4°, and folio.

Thirdly, the individual works comprised under each size are arranged in Alphabetical order, under the authors' names when known, or under the first prominent word in the title, in anonymous works.

Fourthly, to preserve the books in their various relations as to class, sub-class, size, and alphabetical key word, they are numbered as follows: Each general class is designated by one of the twenty-five letters of the alphabet, the sub-classes by one of the Arabic numerals, and the alphabetical keywords by a series of 999 numbers, divided into four parts, corresponding to the four sizes on the shelves, each part containing a list of all possible alphabetical combinations.

The system thus briefly described may appear somewhat complex in theory, but in practice has been found simple, and easily understood by the dullest library boy. It space permitted it could be shown that it adapts itself to libraries of any extent, as to volumes; that it is independent of local arrangement as to the size &c. of the alcoves; and that it is susceptible of indefinite subdivision—in a word, that it is comprehensive, elastic, and accurate. These points, however, must be deferred until a more favorable opportunity.

The plan on which the Catalogue itself is constructed, differs also, in several respects, from the usual methods, and therefore requires some explanation. It will be observed that the present work is divided into three parts, Classified, Topical, and Nominal; to justify this triple partition it may be sufficient to state that as a Catalogue must, necessarily, confine itself to the titles only of books, and as every title contains three distinct elements, namely, the Author, the Title proper, and the Contents or Subject, and as a book is as likely to be known, and asked for, under the one as under the other two of these characteristics, the Catalogue should be so arranged, that a book may be readily found under each of these three heads.

PART I, accordingly contains a list of the books as arranged in classes on the shelves, the books in each division being in alphabetical order, on the principles explained above. A copious list of all the classes and sub-classes is prefixed, and this again is preceded by an index to the classification, so that the place of any subject can be easily ascertained. The titles of books are given as briefly as is consistent with clearness; Parts II. and III., supplying further particulars as to size, imprint, &c., under the corresponding alphabetical headings, books alphabeted under their authors' names being in Part III and anonymous books in Part II.

PART II. contains first a complete and full list of all the Anonymous books, alphabeted under the first prominent word in the title. Secondly, it contains an arrangement of all the books in the Library, excepting those in Class L, alphabeted under the most prominent, or principal word or words in the title, so that this feature may be considered as an Index to the other two parts, and is intended principally to assist those readers who do not remember the authors of the books they want, and are doubtful as to their classification. The following points are to be observed in consulting this part:

1. The Catalogue confines itself in its selection of headings to the words of the title and to the word or words therein which best express the subject of which the book treats. In the absence of a clearly distinctive word in the title, the first prominent word is taken as a heading.

2. Headings are reduced to their most general substantive form, except where they are used as compounds or adjectives only. Thus Mental Philosophy will be found under Mind; Analytical Chemistry and Chemical Science under Chemistry; and Civil Engineering under Engineering On the other hand Military Science, and Political Economy, not having simpler equivalents are treated as compounds, and are to be found under the words Military and Political respectively.

3. Where there is a word in the title, of local or Geographical reference, as for instance the name of a Country, City, Empire, &c., this word is selected as a heading. Thus works on Architecture in general, will be found under the word Architecture, whereas works on Grecian or English Architecture must be sought for under the headings Greece and England respectively. By this means all that relates to a country, will be found under the name of that country.

4. Headings containing a large number of titles are subdivided into sub-headings to facilitate reference. See the words America, Bible, England, Europe, Rome, and United States.

5. Words used in more than one sense are distinguished from each other by a qualifying word. See the words Life, Liberty, Man, and Training.

6. Cross-references are copiously introduced, and will assist the reader in tracing a topic, by directing him to other heads where the same subject is treated in a different form or under another name

It is to be remembered, however, that the main design of Part II. is not to give specific and definite information as to subjects, and thus supercede the use of Part I, but principally to assist those who remember the titles only of books. A complete list of all the books on any subject can be found only in Part I, under the proper class, which must be looked up in the Indexes prefixed thereto. Where the subject is an important one, the inexperienced reader can, perhaps, get this information more readily by consulting Part II under its alphabetical heading, the references at the end of which will direct him to the Class in Part I where the subject is arranged.

Part III contains an alphabetical list of all the Authors of works in the Library whose real names are known, with a sub-alphabetical list of their writings, and the different editions of their individual works. Assumed or Pseudonymous names are likewise entered in proper alphabetical order, but a cross-reference is given to the real name. The titles of works are given more fully than in Parts I and II, but still only so much of the words of the title are retained as may be necessary to express clearly the character and contents of the work, the rest being considered superfluous. Care is taken to specify the edition, the number of volumes, the size, place of publication, date, and in the more important collected works, the contents.

Collections of individual works under a general title are entered under the name of the editor, and are followed by a table of contents in which the names of the authors, and the titles, of the individual works are specified. The individual works are again alphabeted under the names of their respective authors, with a reference to the volume or volumes of the collection where they may be found, and the more important of them, are alphabeted in the same way as books published separately, in Parts I and II.

The Supplement contains a list of the books purchased while this work was going through the press, so that the present Catalogue contains a complete list of all the books that circulate.

It has been thought advisable to separate the books embraced in Class L, comprising Prose Fiction and Juvenile Literature, from the more solid reading. The reader will find a Special Catalogue of them at the end of this work, the preface to which will inform him of the principles on which it is arranged.

It is hoped that the foregoing explanations are sufficiently clear to enable the reader to use this Catalogue understandingly and with profit. By its triple arrangement of every book it claims to supply accurate and definite information as to the Author, the Title, and the Subject,—one of which points every user of a Catalogue must know, since if he does not, no Catalogue can assist him.

A few words are added in explanation of the use and intention of capital letters, italics, abbreviations, and other typographical helps used in this work.

Small Capitals are used throughout for headings, and in Parts I and III, and in the titles of anonymous books in Part II, indicate the authors' names or other alphabetical key words under which the books are arranged on the shelves. Individual Biographies in Class T. 1–5 (and also in Class Lc. 8 in the Special Catalogue) are arranged on the shelves under the Subject or person whose life is narrated; hence in those Classes in Part I, the heading of such works is that of the Subject, the author's name following the title in italics. In Part III, for the sake of uniformity, the author's name is printed in small capitals, and the subject in italics, to show that the shelf arrangement of such works is an exception to the general rule. Works bound with others, or forming part of a collection, are of course arranged under the key word of the work of which they form a part. The Catalogue alphabets them the same as other works, but in Parts I and III gives a reference to the proper key word, and in Part II, the whole title of the work containing the key word (which in such cases is always the first word) is enclosed in brackets.

Prefixes, adjuncts, titles, &c., in headings, are printed in italics, as are also words to indicate a cross-reference, authors of works bound with others, or in collections, Pseudonyms (inclosed in brackets after the real name of the author,) and finally the words "preface" and "copyright" prefixed to dates.

A single dash shows that the preceding heading is understood: a subsequent dash indicates the omission of a subordinate heading.

It will be observed that some of the books have this mark * attached to their shelf numbers. This signifies that those books are in the DeMilt Library, and that they do not circulate, but may be consulted in the room It may be proper to state that the present Catalogue contains only such books of the DeMilt Library as have been purchased since the adoption of the New System in 1872. The main portion of this valuable collection, embracing about 4,500 volumes, will be catalogued at the earliest opportunity, and published either in a Special Catalogue or as part of the next Supplement.

The abbreviations and remaining signs used in this work, that require notice, are the same as those already explained in the preface to the Special Catalogue, to which the reader is referred for further particulars.

Readers in making lists of books wanted, are requested to give the following particulars, in the order enumerated: Alphabetical key word, (the criteria by which this is to be found have been sufficiently explained on page VI,) the Title, as printed in the Catalogue, and the Shelf-number. Be careful not to omit the Class letter.

A few typographical errors have been discovered, and corrected in the "Errata." Mistakes in Classification, Authors' names, and Titles, of which no doubt a few have escaped observation, in the necessarily hurried manner in which the system has been applied, will, if discovered, be corrected in the next edition.

In conclusion the compiler desires to acknowledge the great assistance he has derived from the printed catalogues of different libraries throughout the country, and particularly from those of the Boston Public Library, the St. Louis Public School Library, and the Mercantile Library of this City. The rules regulating the selection of headings, and abridgement of titles, laid down by the compiler of the last of these three Catalogues, have been generally followed in the present work.

PREFACE.

The following Catalogue of Books contains a list of the so-called "Light Literature" comprising Prose Fiction (Novels, Romances, Tales, and Sketches), and Juvenile Literature—that is, Elementary Works on all branches of knowledge designed to meet the wants, and suited to the capacity, of the young. As many of our readers are between the ages of twelve and eighteen years, it was thought that they would feel grateful for a selection like this, that would guide them in their choice of books, and which, it was hoped, would form an easy introduction to the more advanced works comprised in the main Catalogue; to which, accordingly, the reader is referred, who may be dissatisfied with the meagre list of Scientific Works embraced in Class L. 5-6 and 8-9.

This Catalogue is constructed, with some slight modifications, on the same principle as the larger one—that is, there is, first, a Classified Index of the books in the order in which they are arranged on the shelves. In this Catalogue, however, the titles and not the authors are arranged alphabetically in Class L. 1 and L. 7. This part is arranged under the following heads:

I. PROSE FICTION.

L. Critical and Historical Works.
L. 1. English Prose Fiction, including Translations.
L. 2. German Prose Fiction.
L. 3. French and other Foreign Prose Fiction.
L. 4. Ancient and Mediæval Prose Fiction.

II. JUVENILE LITERATURE.

L. 5. General Works.
L. 6. Science.
L. 7. Fiction.
L. 8. History.
L. 8. Geography, Voyages and Travels.
La. 8. General History.
Lb. 8. History of the United States.
Lc. 8. Biography.
L. 9. Morals, Religion and Poetry.

In Class Lc. 8, as in Class T. 1-5, of the large Catalogue, the lives of individuals are arranged under the subject—i. e. the name of the person whose life is described, and not under the name of the author. Secondly. There is a list of the titles of the books of which the authors are unknown arranged alphabetically according to the first word, not a preposition nor article. Thirdly. There is an alphabetical list of authors, so far as their real names could be ascertained. The second and third parts contain the full titles, together with the size and imprint (place and date of publication) which is omitted in the Classified Index.

Some of the abbreviations and marks used in the Catalogue may need a word of explanation. A list of those which occur most frequently, with their signification, is subjoined.

Ed. signifies "Edited," "Edition," or "Editor." Pseud. i. e. Pseudonym, after an author's name, denotes that the name is an assumed one. A reference to the real name is given where it is known. n. d. signifies "no date," and denotes that the date of publication is not given on title page. n. p. signifies "no place," and denotes that place of publication does not occur on title page. Where there are various places and various dates of publication, this is indicated by the abbreviations v. p. and v. d. Tr. signifies "Translated," "Translation," or "Translator." v. signifies "volume" or "volumes."

Brackets are used (1) after an author's name, to indicate the pseudonym under which he sometimes or generally wrote. (2). Within the title they denote additions to make the sense clearer, or to indicate the form or contents, or they indicate transpositions or additions to shorten the title. (3). After the title they denote places or dates of publication which have been ascertained from other sources than the title page. Preceded by the words cop. and pref. thus [cop. 1871] and [pref. 1872] they denote respectively that the works were copyrighted in 1871, or the date of preface was 1872.

The designations of size, as 18°, 12°, 8°, &c., bear no reference to the folding of the leaves, but are merely used, for want of a better sign, to indicate approximately the actual measurements. Works measuring 6 inches or less are designated as 24°; 6½ inches as 18°; 7 inches as 16°; 8 inches as 12°; 10 inches as 8°.

The letter and number following each title indicates the place of the work on the shelves, and should be written on the reader's application, together with the author's name and title.
